Wonky Woolies

In 2010 Borders-born Alison Pottie launched her knitwear company, Wonky Woolies, from her flat in Glasgow. Her custom bobble hats were such a success that within just six months she had employed an assistant and moved into business premises.

In 2018 the business moved from Glasgow to Kelso to support expansion in line with its sales revenue objectives. The firm also widened its product range to include knitted scarves and headbands following an investment of £50,000 in new machinery. Alison said: 'We want to remain small batch producers and with the machinery in place now, we can do this whilst simultaneously increasing our sales.'

The business also creates one-off orders, for example customised wedding hats. This includes the customer choosing the colours, the type of fibre and finalising the design template. The business works closely with the customer to ensure the end result is exactly what they wished for.
